FASB-13: Lease Accounting Changes and Challenges for Commercial Real Estate

With the news that the Financial Accounting Standards Board (FASB) intends to formally move forward with plans that will fundamentally alter the way leases are accounted for on financial statements beginning in December, 2018 that will impact financial statements for 2017 and 2018, businesses are recognizing that they will need to adapt and these changes have a very significant impact on commercial real estate. The changes affect all companies and other organizations that lease commercial property and the brokerage and other commercial real estate services professionals who represent them.

Successfully integrating these changes into your business begins with understanding what changes are needed, what they mean, and what solutions are available for you to efficiently and effectively make the transition process a seamless (and painless) experience.

Join Mark Stapp with the W. P. Carey School of Business on March 29 for a panel discussion on the impact these changes will have.
